Another Singing Mouse.

The family of a well known gentleman, who lives on Seventh street, have been greatly exercised for some weeks by the singing of what sounded like a canary bird, behind the wainscoting of the house and between the walls of the partitions. All through the night the singing has been done, and sometimes it has been so loud as to waken the gentleman and his wife and disturb them. Yesterday Mr. F. succeeded, with the help of one or two lady friends, in capturing the vocalist. A brick was removed from the hearth in the kitchen, a trap was set, and after a long wait a mouse ventured out and into the trap. Last evening a Commercial reporter was at Mr. F.'s house, where several other friends were gathered to observe the wonder.

The wire trap containing the mouse was placed upon the table, and the singing anxiously awaited. The mouse, an ordinary looking one with a rough coat and black bead-like eyes, did not seem disposed to sing, and after a long wait and a good many expressions of incredulity concerning his vocalistic abilities, it was suggested that the mouse be fed. A little bread was given it and some water. It went for the water, and began an extraordinary amount of face-washing, and general primping, betraying its sex immediately, and convincing the audience that they might expect a soprano or contralto, and not a bass or baritone. After the prima donna had finished her toilette, she gathered herself up in a little brown ball and began to sing. She began with a twitter like a woodbird, then she chirped like a sparrow and then settled down into a long, sweet warble, like a young canary. As the tiny thing swelled up its throat and rolled its black eyes and executed the most wonderful little trills, and roulades, and cadenzas, and the sweeter diminuendos, and crescendos, the listeners looked at one another in wonder and delight. There it was at last—a real little mouse, sitting up in its cage and singing with all its might. It is impossible to describe the character of its singing, and Mrs. F. says that it varies remarkably every time it sings. It is a soft, sweet tone, not clear and sharp, like the singing of an old canary—rather like a young bird, just learning to sing. Occasionally it makes a whining exactly like a very young puppy, and then, after a chirp or two, starts off on its song again.

Talking had no effect, and did not seem to annoy it; and the cage was even passed around from one to another without interrupting the singing of the little prisoner. It had been singing a straight hour when our reporter left, and was still at it, and entertaining an admiring and wondering party of listeners.—Cincinnati Commercial, 4th.

HOW THEY ARE KEPT IN ORDER.—The new plan of keeping the Princeton students in order, propounded at the Alumni dinner, is to put every one of them, upon matriculation, under bonds to keep the peace. Nothing has come of the late trouble more mortifying than this proposition. Outside of colleges, men are bound to keep the peace only after they have given sufficient evidence of an intention to break it. The Princeton plan, if it is adopted, will be based upon the presumption that young men go to the college intending to be turbulent and defiant of necessary discipline. It is doubtful whether bonds to keep the peace would have much effect in restraining those who are likely to disregard the restraints of decency, who are lacking in self-respect, and who care nothing for the mortification which they may occasion their families. However, if the experiment be necessary, let it by all means be tried. Injuries to persons and property might thus be atoned for in the only way possible.

He who slips occasionally on horse-radish must expect to be drawn through the vale of sleep by night-mare. —Whitfield Times.

THE DIPLOMATIC GAME IN ENGLAND.

A dense air of mystery pervades every official residence and the approaches thereto. Nervous whispers concerning some acute chessman in which Beaconsfield is engaged, are vaguely heard. But the British diplomat who attempt sinful games are but babes in the hands of Schouvaloff and Beust. The story goes that Beaconsfield and Beust, together, and Beust, announced his belief that Austria would not in any case make war upon Russia. He added that Montenegro, who is a kind of diplomatic middle-aged man, and had been giving Beaconsfield all sorts of assuming information about Austria's future role, had hastened back to Vienna. Then Beaconsfield attempted to be very smart, and said, "Oh, Montenegro needn't have run away! Just lend him to us, and he will help us to persuade the Russian Ambassador that we are going to war, which it is important at this juncture that he should believe." "Hum!" answered Count Beust, rather dryly, "I don't see any objection to letting you use Montenegro as you please, perhaps I ought to mention that ever since the beginning of the war we have been lending him to Schouvaloff, who has been anxious to make you believe in our antagonism to Russia."—King's London Letter in Boston Journal.

NEARLY KILLED BY A RELIC OF ANTIETAM.—The boy, William Marshall, who was injured last week by the explosion of a shell which he picked up on the Antietam battle-field is said to be in a very dangerous condition. His right hand was so terribly torn that it had to be amputated at once. The left wrist was broken, and the thumb, forefinger and a part of the next finger were amputated, and we understand that his physicians fear he will remain perfectly blind. Accidents from shells were of frequent occurrence for some years after the war in all localities where there had been a battle, and nearly always occurred in attempts to extract the powder from the shells. The accident is most remarkable from the fact that it was occasioned by a shell which had remained in the ground nearly sixteen years.—Hagerstown Mail.

An English writer states that he was much impressed with the gentleness of American manners. He ought to send his boy to one of our colleges, or try getting out of a crowded depot with two grip-sacks when our hackmen are feeling well.—Breakfast Table.

A PARALLEL.

We should like to hear some great man lecture upon Tweed and the political system which made his career possible. We should like to hear what particular vices of men or precedent build up such characters as Tweed, Kelly and Morrissey in a city like New York. It seems to us that some good would come to this land if it could know why manhood always gets more censure than knavery, and where this impulse originated which made the goddess upon the almighty dollar more potent over the acts of men than He who gives and takes away the breath of life.

Here was a man, born honest, with great capacities for villainy. He flourished and succeeded upon the strength of consummate knavery. He became over-confident, and his fall was the signal for a crusade which followed him to a felon's grave.

By the side of this man look at the system of suffrage and political ethics which he used. Begun in the liberality of success with honest fathers, yet with infinite capacities for evil. Prespiring too fast by what may be called the strength of novelty and self-confidence, the day is fast coming when it shall fall. There will again be a popular crusade, and death. Will the entire system be swept away as our European friends predict, or will the fittest survive and only the vicious precedents expire?

Tweed is dead—his essence and power for evil are merely transferred.

NEWSPAPER MUSCLE.

The Virginia City Chronicle is a paper run on thoroughly Christian principles—that is to say, on principles of muscular christianity. Few of our readers have forgotten the sound and well deserved thrashing which Dennis McCarthy administered to a bumptious disciple of Dennis Kearney. Sam Davis as a pugilist occupies a place but little below that of Bill Davis, and now we find that on the same staff another newspaper pugilist has been victorious. A man named Sheridan, employed at the Bank of California agency, entered the Evening Chronicle office yesterday, and tried to chastise T. E. Picotte for an article written concerning the late masquerade ball. Picotte polished him off in fine style, adding another to the list of journalistic muscular triumphs. We would suggest the establishment of a sparring platform in the editorial rooms of the Virginia City Evening Chronicle, where the innocent burghers may be polished off at leisure if they venture disrespect to the craft.—Stock Report.

We ask leave to recall the fact that we have never said anything really objectionable against the Chronicle or its staff. To be sure we did chide the mail clerk upon one occasion, but it was done thoughtlessly and without serious intent. The boy who runs the job press is assured of our continued esteem.

HOTEL FOR WOMEN.

The Hotel Gazette, of San Francisco, says that Flood & O'Brien are going to erect a mammoth hotel, cost $1,000,000, on Market street, in that city. The edifice is to be devoted to the use of working women. The Gazette says that the enterprise is undertaken because these gentlemen wish to endear their names to posterity. We hope their fame may not be as dear to posterity as it has been to us, and if they can spare the money we suggest that an addition be built, to serve as a speculator's home, an infirmary for broken-down stock brokers. The best way for these gentlemen to endear their names to posterity will be to cause the present generation to speak of them with respect.

KEARNEY.

Kearney, the great San Francisco agitator, threatens now to even get the better of the church opposition. He denies the right of the Catholic or any other church to interfere with his politics. As a Catholic he openly rebels against any assumption of this right, and the sand lot agitators agreeing with Dennis, have adopted resolutions telling the Archbishop to 'keep his pastoral hands off.' It is our own opinion that no church should be allowed to take such action, because it is against the spirit of free institutions, and if carried out would eventually contravene the laws of our land.

The Senate has voted to repeal the bankrupt law '37 to 6.

EDUCATION OF GIRLS.

The Sacramento Bee, in trying to shed a flood of light upon the above question, drops its lantern and in the smoke of the wick we read this:

The education of girls takes different forms, according to the state of society in which they live. In old and well established communities, where there is permanent wealth and widely extended family connections, it is perhaps safe to educate girls as ornaments of society. But in a country like ours, where families are constantly being scattered and where the rich man of to-day may be poor and broken down to-morrow, it is not safe.

We hold it true that women were never intended for anything but ornaments. This country of ours, spoken of, has no society. There can be no society when fortunes are swept away and made in one day, and it is idle to expect the destruction of the house without a loss also of the comforts and ornaments which made it a home. Whenever there is society educated women will be its ornament, in spite of all the masculine vices, and the hardships which beset her path. It will never do, however, to educate woman to be an ornament, any more than it would be well to varnish a lily for the natural essence of beauty is lost in either case. The rich man should educate his daughter to be a sensible being, and her mind will demand and revive those mental graces which fit her for the adornment of society. A public career, of conquest, perhaps, should never enter her head, but she should be taught that to make home happy and improve its mental atmosphere is the proper element of woman who desires to become an ornament in society. When she has learned this home lesson, there are no hardships in store which can take away her ladyship, or deprive her of the ability to ornament any society or preside at any man's fireside. Show her how to make a home happy, and you have graced her as an ornament to any sphere, just as the shrub which you have planted and cared for during its weakness will blossom when you are gone, perhaps, and makes one little spot of earth cheerful and attractive to all men.

LAND-GRABBERS.

Our rancher friends north of Susanville are promised some trouble on account of the encroachment of land-grabbers and the Desert Act. Proceedings have lately been commenced before the Register at Susanville to set aside a large number of desert land entries, made by George Thompson in the orthodox Boss Carr style. The land is situated in Big valley, Lassen county, and is on the banks of Pitt river. Affidavits have been made showing this to be the most fertile land in that section, and actual settlers want to retain the land because they believe they can make a living from 100 acres without irrigation. Vegetables, corn, and other crops have been raised upon adjoining land, and a large number of farmers have made affidavit to the fact that the land is not in any sense desert land nor subject to entry under that head.

We do not pretend to a knowledge of the exact fact in the case, but we believe that land-grabbing has been going on very extensively in that section under what was known as the Swamp Land act. Land which is available to actual settlers, in small tracts, should be sold in that way by Government. Nevada is the only region of which we have knowledge where the Desert act must prove a blessing. Without doubt there are other States and Territories where it may work equally well.

In San Francisco, on the 15th, United States Judges Sawyer and Hoffman decided that the cubic air ordinance was constitutional, and incidentally expressed the opinion that the law providing for the cropping of the hair of Chinamen was unconstitutional, being equivalent to mutilation in their case.

The Tilton-Beecher scandal is opened wide once more. Mrs. Tilton has acknowledged soft impeachment, and Beecher denies once more. A reconciliation between Teddy and Lizzie is promised.

Montgomery Blair's resolution was introduced in the House on the 15th and discussed.

The weavers of New Hampshire are on a strike, owing to reduction in wages.

The manufacturers in Lowell, Mass., will reduce wages from five to fifteen per cent.
